I have created in Indesign a PDF using Helvetica, but using the Touch-Up text tool only types in Arial.. ' I was wondering if having another version of the Helvetica installed (say, in my user folder) would give me different results, and I might give that a try.. Yeah, I suspect what's happening is maybe something like that, but it's strange that only Helvetica (as far as I can tell) seems to get this 'special treatment.. When I try any other font with the touchup tool it will change the text to what I have chosen.

This is so that downstream devices don't mix up 'your' Helvetica with a Helvetica which may be installed on the device.. Click on File>Properties Click on the Fonts tab Embed Standard Fonts Using PDF/A Conversion Using Qoppa's PDF editor, PDF Studio, you can convert PDF documents to PDF/A under Document > Preflight, which among other things will embed fonts into the PDF.. My PDF setting for subset fonts is: Subset fonts when percent of characters used is less than:100% Is there anything else I need to do to ensure my edited PDFs use Helvetica.. Click to expand I am using Acrobat Pro X and same thing here But when I export my PDF from Indesign or any other program, it is converting the Helvetica to Arial.. Forgot to mention also, i'm actually on a PC which makes this all stranger (yeah i appreciate i'm on a mac forum - i'm actually a mac user but am forced to use a pc at work)..) I'm curious to know if it's just me Edit: Cleaning the font cache didn't help, and I can reproduce this problem when creating from TextEdit too (on Tiger/PPC/Pro 8, and Leopard/Intel/Pro 9).. I have checked my font's folder and I have the TT truetype font installed, infact I have the whole typeface.. Double-check that your fonts are embedded via the following method: Open your file with Adobe Acrobat Pro.. They seem to have toned down the warning messages in version 9 I'm having the same problem as Telecomm here.. I think you may have all your warnings turned off? Because when I try to edit I get similar problems to you but with a host of warnings, i.
